NEWS BRIEFS OF INTEREST TO COMMUNITY

Union Grove Enterprise Suspends Publication March 29

The Union Grove Enterprise, which has been printed for the past 45 years, ceased publication with the last issue of Thursday, March 29. The reason Mr. Colby gives for giving up the paper is that it will be impossible to devote the required amount of time to the paper, when he becomes postmaster of Union Grove. He will succeed Fred Keuper as postmaster there during the first part of April.

The Waukegan Tea company, consisting of a chain of stores in Wisconsin, lost $317,000 in ten months, John F. Harper, referee in bankruptcy, said in his findings of fact and conclusions of law, in connection with the contest between the receiver of the Tea company and the trustee of the bankrupt United Food Stores company for the possession of the assets of the Union company.

Since excavation work has been started at the Waukegan courthouse for the new addition it was found that the plans call for excavations only under the part where the heating plant and boiler rooms are to be located, and efforts are now being made to have excavations under the entire addition. The purpose is to make sufficient basement room for the storage of screens, alarm windows, lawn machinery, janitor's supplies and other things of that nature.

The road and bridge committee last week opened bids for the construction of a bridge over the Des Plaines river at Gurnee. The lowest bidders being the Triangle Construction Co. of Hobart, Ind., there being six bidders. The bidders and their figures were as follows:

Triangle Construction Co., Hobart, Ind., $16,304.46; W. H. Shons Co., Freeport, $17,936.30; Batson Bros., Hebron, Ill., $18,894.90; Olenford Construction Co., Palatine, $18,987.46; H. W. Green Construction Co., Chicago, $18,473.60; Joliet Bridge and Construction Co., $20,913.28.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad has filed with the Illinois Commerce Commission its answer in the Gurnee subway, asking that the company be given extension of time for completing the work to Dec. 31, 1923, and also making several other important demands.

The petition asks also that: An order be entered against Lake county and Warren township requiring them to pay monthly their proportionate share of the work as the improvement progresses.

Laying out of a new highway connecting Lake Forest and Barrington, and providing for an additional route from Lake Forest through Highland is one of the newest plans of the state highway department, and Chas. E. Russell, county superintendent of highways and C. N. Lamb, district state highway engineer, went over the proposed route last week for the purpose of making recommendations to the state highway department.

Charles Chock, one of the best known residents of the town of Brighton, has donated a corner of his farm on the Kansasville-Brighton road to the town to be used as a tourist camp site.

Libertyville officials opened bids last week for the paving of the village's share, and found James H. Cape & Sons, of Racine, the lowest bidders. The bid was $59,688.40. The Eclipse Construction company of Winnetka was next.

Timbors gave way on the coal elevator at the Nestle's Food Co. plant at Burlington last Wednesday, letting some twenty tons of coal down into the boiler room. Luckily workmen heard the cracking timbers in time to get out of the way and no one was injured.

20 Years Ago in Antioch

Thursday, April 16, 1903

Mrs. John Hancock of Junction City, Wis., is visiting relatives and friends here this week.

On Saturday evening of this week there will be a meeting at the school house for the purpose of electing one school director. Every one interested in the school should attend the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lasco are the proud possessors of a girl baby born last week. The interesting family of eight children consists of four boys and four girls and Frank says that's just enough to dance a set of the old fashioned quadrille.

J. C. James, Jr., was transacting business in Chicago Tuesday.

Charles E. Blunt has accepted a position as agent and traveling salesman for the National Silverware Co., of Philadelphia.

COMPLETING PRACTICE FOR PLAY AT HIGH SCHOOL IN MAY

The cast for "In the Garden of the Shah," to be given May 4, is working day and night perfecting the roles for the opera. Vida Palmer, who takes the leading part, plays with Maurice Mumford. They will be well worth the price of admission. Both have voices of unusual promise and neither has been heard this year by an Antioch audience—there is a surprise for you. Vera and Lester Nelson make a very effective pair of lovers. They can dance together as well as sing a double part. Mable Vna Duzen takes a unique comedy part, frantically pursuing Mr. L. R. Watson—the "Shelk" from Alabama. We can't blame her for no is surely "some shelk," but then she isn't half bad as a reincarnated sorceress. Albert Herman will make his first bow as a soloist. He is the Shah whose "lot is sad" altho his household is wonderfully well trained. The part of the Shelk will be taken by J. a singer of wide experience, with a trained voice of unusual richness and expression. The orchestra is drilling, the costumes have been ordered, and the weather man implored to send a week of real spring weather to help the roads so that everyone may come.

PACKAGE SALE AT VILLAGE HALL ON SATURDAY

Attention is called to the package sale to be held in the Village hall Saturday afternoon at 2:30, under the management of the Woman's Club and for the joint benefit of the library and the Boy Scout organization.

The club women are responding generously to the appeal for packages and many things are to be donated that are not often found at a package sale, such as pies, cakes, baked beans, cottage cheese and other "goodies" too numerous to mention. All who are interested in the library or the Boy Scouts are asked to help make this sale a success by first giving some packages and then coming to buy those given by others. If possible take your package to the village hall Friday afternoon and thus give the committee time to arrange and sort them. When we have a good thing let's help it along. Both the library and the scouts are all right.

COMMUNITY SALE TO BE HELD TODAY

The community auction sale that was scheduled to take place at Salem on last Saturday, was postponed until this (Thursday) afternoon on account of weather conditions.

AUCTION SALE

There will be an auction sale on the Emmet C. Hastings farm, 1 1/2 miles northwest of Wadsworth on the River road on Saturday, April 14. Eighteen head of choice Holsteins will be offered for sale. Several good horses will also be placed on sale. L. J. Slocum will be in charge of the selling and the sale will start at 1 o'clock. The stock is owned by Mr. Hastings.

SCHOOL ELECTION

Antioch Grade School election to be held at the Grade school on Saturday afternoon, April 14, from 2:00 to 4:00 for the election of a president and two members of the board.

Local Grade School Girl Writes History of Antioch

By Gladys Davis

The village of Antioch is located in section eight of township 46 N. R. 10 E. Antioch was incorporated February 29, 1892. The population at that time was just a little over 300. There were just enough people necessary to incorporate.

In 1842 there were about nine log houses. They were all located a great distance apart, and very many of them were not located in what is now the village proper. The owners of the nine log houses were as follows: Myron Stephen, where George Wedge farm is now located; W. P. Shepherd, where Jake Savage house is now; Darius B. Gage, where the Antioch hotel is now; Ira Simons, where the present Paul Ferris house is now; Thomas Warner, where the Rymer place at Leona Lake is now; Thomas L. Gage, where old Preator farm is now located; Ebenezer Eugalis, where William Ribear farm is now; Person lived where Charles Sibley now lives. Sedger Simmons, where W. Smart's farm is now on the Channel Lake road.

The first industry in the community was a saw mill and grist mill together, located directly back of what is now Charles Lux's residence. The mill was on Sequoit creek. The creek was much swifter then, in order to saw lumber and grind grain. Another industry was two brickyards, one down by Kretz, on the Channel Lake road, and the other was in back of Ross' restaurant. The one down by Kretz was owned by "Bricky" Cashmore. The first brick building in Antioch was a hotel owned by John Rice, which is now the Antioch hotel.

About 1843 there were many Indians down by Channel Lake, but, as one of the old settlers said, they were very friendly and peaceful. They were all anxious to learn and he taught the ways of the white man in working.

There was a great many animals, some of which were deer, antelope, wolves, ducks, quails around this vicinity, but as the population of the village increased the game decreased.

There were about two stores in Antioch in 1842. The first store built was the Dan Head store, where Reeve's drug store now is, but the store is presently located up at "the north end," the proprietor is William Hancock.

There was a store named "Smith's Store," where F. R. King's drug store is now. A little later a store was built where Ray Webb's racket store now is.

There was quite a few destructive fires in Antioch, namely, the Opera House, then owned by Foltz, it was a wooden structure. It was completely destroyed by fire in 1892 and burnt the entire north side of what was then known as the "Hamlin square."

Another fire was where Ross restaurant is now, destroying quite a bit of the building, and still another fire was the Hillebrand and Webb block. The people first got their mail from Brass Ball Tavern, where the men would take turns going after it. Later the mail was gotten from Wadsworth to here, and from here to Richmond, three times a week, and non also took turns carrying it.

The amusements in the older days were very different than our amusements are today. There were husking bees and apple paring parties. At husking bees the people would all gather at one house (farm) and husk corn, chat, drink cider and have a good time.

At apple paring parties, in the fall of the year, the women would gather together at one house and pare apples after they had finished at one house they would go all together to another house.

For the men, there was a small one-half mile race track around what is now the Antioch Lumber and Coal Co., and J. E. Didama place. Some of the horses in the races were: A white horse owned by S. Taylor. H. Wright had a bald faced (white) horse. They held races every Saturday afternoon.

Then came the great gold rush to California. Many people from Antioch went. There was no direct route, no roads, or no railroad, so the people went in canvas covered wagons drawn by oxen, over the great plains. The hardship the people endured cannot be expressed in writing.

Above Smith's store, what is now King's drug store, the first school was held, on Sunday church services were held. Later, the school was changed to what is now Panowski's blacksmith shop until the present Antioch grade school was built in 1892.

The first church was built in back of present M. E. church, on the hill. It was then Baptist, but later the M. E. church got possession of it.

The first hotel was kept by Mr. Gage. It was the very first house or building to serve meals and lodgings.

After the village had become incorporated the elections were held at Thomas Warner's place at Leona Lake, what was then considered the center of the township. I think the first president of Antioch was Frank Pittman. Later Mr. Rock-Emmons was village clerk.

The sidewalks were all wooden along Main and Lake streets, the only streets at that time, until Mr. Ira Soles built a strip of cement sidewalk up Lake street, then later on Main street.

The first automobile (a very peculiar one at that) was owned by Miss Susan Morley (now Mrs. Chas. Webb). (Tut) L. M. Haynes owned one before Miss Morley. The automobiles were great big high clumsy things, run by chafas.

Before the Antioch Lumber and Coal Company was organized, people had to draw coal and lumber from Racine and Kenosha by oxen. In about 1897 the Wilbur Lumber and Coal company of Waukegan established a lumber yard where the present lumber company is. Charles Granger of McHenry being the first proprietor. Mr. Vos and Mr. Buschman are the present proprietors.

The first newspaper in Antioch was "The Antioch News," John Burke being the owner and starter of it 36 years ago. Mr. Burke is now living at Chetek, Wis. The paper is being published to this very day.

In 1893 L. B. Grice built the first telephone in Antioch. The lines ran from Antioch to Channel Lake, the Olford hotel. From Antioch to O. E. Herman's at Bluff Lake. Later Mr. Grice sold the telephone plant to C. E. Herman, and later Mr. Herman sold to Chicago Telephone company.

The first lighting plant in Antioch was built by J. R. Cribb. Later Mr. Cribb sold out to the Public Service Company. About 14 years ago the electric lights were put through Antioch from Waukegan.

The first creamery in Antioch was built by S. S. Taylor. It was east of

Tuesday's Election Vital to Antioch's Future Growth

L. B. Congdon Ticket Out to Smash Plans for Local Improvements and Town's Prosperity

Tuesday will undoubtedly find Antioch in the midst of one of the most interesting political battles ever waged here. It will be a battle between the "progressives" and the "non-progressives." A battle for the election of a village president and a board of trustees.

At the primary election held a few weeks ago Herbert J. Vos was given a large vote for the office of village president, and William Hillebrand, W. W. Varriner and William Christman given the largest majorities for members to compose the village council.

During the past few weeks a great deal of agitation and false rumors have been directed at those whose names appeared on the ballot. This was closely followed by a ticket put up by petition. The petition being circulated and signed by L. B. Congdon.

The fact that such men as George Bartlett and Frank Dunn should allow themselves to be enveloped onto such a ticket is not comprehensible. Both

Just Among Ourselves

"A dollar down and a dollar a week." Wear 'em while you pay—has been the motto of clothing stores. But from now on they are not going to be alone in their glory, for Henry, from now on is going to sell Ford's that way. Put a "buck" in the bank and go over and pick out a choice Little. Pay the balance in weekly installments and join the gang on the boulevards.

Going out of business, will sell baby buggy and bed. Phone 204. Want ad in Fulton, Mo., Sun.

Congdon has visions of again wearing the five-pointed star which is the Village property, but is now being worn by Bill James, Village Marshal, et al. Congdon's aim is to get "his party" through and then he may be able to adorn his chest with the treasured emblem. It is to laugh!

Several Antioch grown-ups are foregoing the pleasure of radio because they are too proud to ask the little boy next door how to fix up an outfit.

The roads are so bad now that practically every motorist who attempts to journey to the south of the Village has to be pulled out of the mud. Several of the autos were in so far the local garage wreckers could not extricate them, for fear of getting the wrecker stuck.

It takes a woman's intuition to grasp the great difference between two dollars and $1.98.

SURVEY FOR TUNNEL AT NORTH END OF TOWN

Engineers for the Soo Line were in Antioch, Wednesday surveying the crossing at the north end of town. The plans for this crossing call for a tunnel.

Thirty-nine head of pure bred Duroc sows brought a total of $1548 at the Wm. G. Voss sale at the Kuersten Motor Co. garage in Burlington last Saturday. This is an average of just below $40 a head.

Mrs. Robert L. Turner, well known and highly respected Solon Mills lady, passed away on the morning of Mar. 31, her death following an operation at the West Side hospital in Chicago a week previous.

men, very popular, and seeming the type of men who desire to progress, have aligned themselves with a group whose sole ambition seems to take life easy. Possibly some of them deserve to, but there is no conceivable reason why this group should try to hold the more progressive men down.

The very fact that all candidates on the People's ticket are successful business men should in itself command the vote of every progressive person in town.

Antioch has made great strides in improvements in the last six years and is now looked on as "the town" of west Lake county. To stop its progress at this time is shutting off the possibility of Antioch growing into something greater. We are centrally located on a chain of lakes that are not surpassed within many miles of Chicago. One state road with many arteries attached to it passes through the village to the north and many other approaches from the east are contemplated.

This year will see the inception of a golf course and possibly one or two more. Is Antioch going to be prepared to meet this progress or is its inability to take advantage of this opportunity going to drive it away? Mr. King, the retiring president, has given a great deal of his time to put Antioch on the map. He has succeeded. His business now demands his attention and he feels someone else should carry on the work. The logical man is Herbert Vos, who has been close to Mr. King throughout all his fights to get through improvements, and is ready to go on with the work.

The malicious statement being used to the effect that Mr. Vos is not a properly owner in itself shows the inability of those behind them to correctly state facts. Mr. Vos is equally interested in a business with Mr. Buschman that was the largest taxpayer in Antioch township last year.

It seems a pity that men who are progressive and ambitious to get ahead should have to give up their time to defend themselves against attacks that are unjustly made by a few irresponsible parties whose sole ambition seems to be to put Antioch to sleep and make it an asylum for the retarded.

The unbelievable distortion of facts on the pole and lighting question are a revelation to the possibility of propaganda work. Those who are in doubt on these questions should get the facts now. Don't wait until after election and be sorry.

Depot street improvement is a necessity. All of our biggest business assets use this for its main artery to the village. Should they be hindered further in their progress? The elevating of Depot street years ago proved a hardship to one concern and cost them thousands of dollars and never a word was said. Isn't it time that justice was thought of in Antioch towards business?

Now for Mr. Congdon, the man who openly brags that he never spends a cent in this town, and openly solicited mail order business among his neighbors in an effort to get revenge on the merchants for his being asked to resign as constable on account of his nefarious warfare on the traveling public that brought criticism from all sections. Here is a man whose vital ambition is to cut down taxes in Antioch, although he does not seem opposed to "collect" from the city of Chicago, while apparently of good health. This is the type of man who would be the political "boss" of this section. The type of man who would load Antioch into the small town millennium.

It is the duty of every man and woman in the village to vote at the election on Tuesday and uphold this body of men who are devoting much time and money for the upbuilding of Antioch.

"The Girl and the Case"

By Randall Parrish

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Answering an advertisement, calling for a young man willing to engage in service of danger, Matthew West, ex-serviceman just returned from France, where he had been captain of engineers, meets Natalie Coolidge, writer of the advertisement, and without being instructed as to his probable duties, is engaged by her, and that same evening introduced to her friends as her fiancé.

CHAPTER II.—That night, in the Coolidge home, West is startled by the appearance in his room of a young woman, whom he takes to be Natalie, but who escapes before he can be sure. Next morning Natalie tells West she has been troubled by some woman, apparently her double, who has been impersonating her.

CHAPTER III.—Percival Coolidge, Natalie's uncle and guardian, apparently is disconcerted by West's appearance as Natalie's fiancé, and the feeling of antagonism is mutual. Natalie, Coolidge, and West plan a visit of charity to a poor and remote section of the city.

CHAPTER IV.—Leaving West in the car, Natalie and Coolidge enter a small cottage, remaining a length of time which causes him some uneasiness. Before they return, West secures information which leads him to believe Coolidge is being murdered, and about convinces West he is right.

CHAPTER V.—On the party's return to the Coolidge home, Natalie informs West she has been mistaken in her suspicions concerning her "double," and that she has no further need of his services. West is astounded, but helpless. He leaves.

CHAPTER VI.—On his way out of the grounds, West hears a revolver shot, and investigates. He finds Percival Coolidge dead, apparently a suicide. The request so determines. In the city West is visited by Sexton, an old servant of the Coolidges, who tells him he has been mysteriously dismissed, for no apparent reason. He gives it as his belief that Coolidge was murdered, and about convinces West he is right.

CHAPTER VII.—Sexton has overheard a telephone conversation in the Coolidge home, in which a man demands Natalie's presence immediately. He gives an address, and with Sexton, West, who has suspicions of things not being right, strengthens his belief by learning that Coolidge had been about the reason for the trip to the cottage, visits the place. It is a disreputable saloon.

CHAPTER VIII.—West is taken by surprise, knocked out, separated from Sexton, and comes to his senses in a helpless, bound and helpless, and confronted by a man named Hobart, whom West knows to be the man who had rented the house which Natalie visited. The man tells him he (West) is interfering with his plans and if he persists will be done away with. West refuses to compromise. Hobart sends for Natalie, hoping she can induce West to give up his quest.

CHAPTER IX.—Natalie releases West from his bonds and assures him that she has no need for his assistance. Her actions almost convince West she has guilty knowledge of Percival Coolidge's murder. He denies Hobart, and the three, with two companions, attempt to kill him. After a terrible fight West leaps from the window.

CHAPTER X.—West succeeds in eluding his pursuers, finds Sexton bound and gagged, releases him, and the two escape. In the alley Sexton picks up a lady's pocket knife, which he gives to West.

CHAPTER XI.—Concealed in the knife West finds a note in a woman's handwriting appealing to the police to "search the Seminoles." West takes the note to police headquarters, where he finds an old friend he had known in France, McAdams. They find that the Seminoles is a yacht owned by Percival Coolidge.

CHAPTER XII.—McAdams learns the Seminoles is tied up at a pier. West goes over there alone, in disguise, and finds a prisoner, and the vessel sails.

CHAPTER XIII.—His captors inform West that they are determined his activities in the Coolidge case shall be ended. The men deny that Natalie is aboard the vessel. That night, with West, who is in his cabin, the boat is abandoned by its crew. West breaks out of the cabin, finds and releases Natalie, and the two escape on a life raft. The Seminoles goes down.

CHAPTER XIII

The Fate of a Prisoner.

The Seminoles headed straight out into the lake. No sound of movement or speech reached West's ears from the cabin, and he settled down into moody forgetfulness, still staring dully out through the open port. What was to be, would be, but there was nothing for him to do but wait for those who held him prisoner, to act. He was still seated there, listless, incapable even of further thought, when the door was suddenly unlocked. He had barely time to arise in his feet, when the man with the red mustache stepped within, facing him, as he pushed tightly shut the door behind. The fellow's eyes saw the severed rope on the floor, and he smiled, flicking the strands aside contemptuously.

"Smart enough for that, were you?" he asked. "Well, I would have taken them off myself, if I had thought about it. How did you manage? Oh, I see; rather a bright trick, old man."

The man's tone, and air of confidence was impressive; beyond doubt he felt that the cards were all in his hands. West drew in his breath sharply. "May I ask a question or two?"

"Fire away; I'll answer as I please," "Who is the woman on board?"

"Mary, you mean? Hobart's wife." "She came from the place on Wray street last night in an auto?"

"Yes; I brought her along myself." "Alone?"

"There were two of us, Mark and I—why, what are you driving at?" "Just putting some broken threads together. Then Natalie Coolidge is not on this yacht?"

"I should say not. What would we be doing with her out here?"

"Where is she, then?"

"Oh, I begin to see what brought you aboard so easily. West. You thought we had the lady kidnapped, and was sailing off with her. Some stunt, that. What put the idea in your head?"

West hesitated a moment, but decided a truthful answer would do no harm.

"I knew an automobile had driven out of the alley back of Mike's place; and that a woman was in it. When I got away a little later, I picked up a message—a note which had been dropped. It was written in a woman's hand but unsigned."

"The little cat! She dropped it?" "It seems so. You forgot yourself that time. So she was with you, was she?"

"I don't know what you mean. I told you who were with me. Go on; what did the note say?"

"It was only a request for the police to search the Seminoles at once."

"Oh, that's the way the wind blows. But you preferred to tackle the job yourself. I am certainly obliged to you, West."

"You have no reason to be. I took that note to the police, and they are on the case. They are combing the city right now for Hobart, and if they get him, this bubble of yours is likely to be pricked."

"If I, they won't get him. There isn't a fly-cop in Chicago who could locate Jim in a week, and as for Natalie, believe me she is quite able to take care of herself."

"But where is she?" "At home, of course, if you must know—Fairlawn, isn't that the name of the place? We left her there on our way to Jackson park."

"Then the girl was with you?" "Spilled the beans, didn't I? That comes from talking too much. However, there is no harm done. Sure she left with us, but we dropped her out at Fairlawn. It was her machine we were riding in. Say, you've questioned me about enough, so let up. Listen now—you will stay in this stateroom until we get ready to let you out. Don't try any funny business, either, for if you do, you are going to get hurt. There is a guard outside in the cabin, and we are not afraid to shoot out here on the lake. Nobody knows where you are West; so, if

West leaped to the port-hole, and, endeavoring to gain a glimpse without. If land was near it remained invisible, nor could he even be sure of the close proximity of a boat. There seemed to be a smudge there at the left, a black, lumpy shadow, shapeless against the background of sea; yet he could not be sure. Even as he gazed at it doubtfully, the dim object disappeared, fading away like a mirage. Something told him that mysterious shadow was a boat, a boat filled with men, creeping away silently into the night, fleeing from the yacht, and vanishing into the darkness.

What could such action mean? Had every one gone, leaving the vessel totally abandoned, a wreck buffeted by the surges, doomed to go down, unseen, its final fate unknown? Unknown! The word rising to his brain was the answer. There was the rest of the plot. What could be easier, or safer, than this ending? Who would ever know the truth? Who could ever prove anything, even if they suspected? And who was there to suspect? It was a plot infernal.

But if Natalie Coolidge was also prisoner on board, what of her? Wasn't that the very thing most probable? Of course it was; how foolish he had been. These men, recklessly criminal, as they were, would never sacrifice the yacht, and risk their own lives, merely to put him out of the way. He was not important enough for that; he was but an incident.

While this was—must be—a carefully arranged plan. The girl then must be the real victim—his own plight arose merely because he eluded to be there, and the villains dare not leave him alive to tell the story.

The certainty of this acted like an electric shock. He must find the girl, and serve her. Surely she must welcome his coming to her assistance now. She would be alone, free to reveal the truth of all this strange mix-up of affairs; perhaps the old trust, the old confidence between them would be renewed. The hope instantly inspired action. His eager eyes searched the narrow confines of the stateroom for some possible weapon with which to assault the door. The stout stool alone seemed available. Swinging this over his shoulder, hampered by the narrowness of space, he struck again and again, with all his strength, until suddenly the lock gave, and the door burst open.

He stepped cautiously forward, with hands outstretched, and his groping fingers came in sudden contact with the cabin wall, which he followed, circling to the left. In this manner he succeeded in finally locating the door opening out on to the deck, and heaved his way across to the right-hand stateroom door. It was locked, the key gone. He must break a way in; but first he must explain to her, so as to spare her the sudden fright of such an assault. He rapped sharply on the panel.

"Miss Coolidge; you are there, are you not?"

"Yes; who is that?" almost a cry of delight in the voice. "You—you have a voice I know."

"I am Matthew West; but do not ask questions now. The yacht is going down, and I must break this door in to release you. Stand back while I smash the boards. You hear and understand?"

"Yes—yes; I am safely away; have no fear."

A lantern's flickering light revealed the weapon he required—a heavy hatchet, and he snatched it up, and began to splinter the wood with well-directed blows. He worked madly, feverishly, swinging the sharp blade with all his strength and skill, gouging out great splinters of wood, and exchanged, nor was the tray removed until just at twilight, when the fellow appeared again on a similar mission. It became dark, but no light was furnished. Outside the clouds had thickened, and a heavy swell was tossing the vessel about rather roughly. Seemingly the engine was merely endeavoring to maintain head-way, with no port in immediate prospect; they were steering aimlessly into the promise of a stormy night. No sound reached him from the cabin, and finally, worn out mentally and physically, West flung himself on the lower bunk, and lay there motionless, staring up into the intense darkness.

Lying there motionless, yet wide awake, his senses alert, he could feel the labored efforts of the vessel, the slap of waves against the side, the rush of water astern. The Seminoles rolled heavily, yet there was nothing at all alarming in her actions, and West felt no premonition of ill-luck, or fear as to the sea-worthiness of the little craft. He endeavored to arouse himself, to keep awake, but finally fatigue conquered, and he sank into a deep sleep. He had no knowledge of how long this slumber lasted, or what suddenly awakened him, so startled at the moment that he sat up in the berth, staring into the blackness. Was it a dream, or a reality? Had some one spoken? He could neither see nor hear anything; the boat seemed to be motionless, not even troubling now to the beat of the engine—the silence was uncanny. Something was wrong, must be wrong. Where were they, at anchor in some harbor or helplessly adrift on the lake? The yacht rocked gently, as though the swell of the sea no longer buffeted her; there was no sound of action on the deck above. Then he heard a voice again, outside, reaching him this time plainly through the open port.

"All set, Mapes," it said sharply. "Come on down. You finished the job?"

"Ay, ay, sir," the answer gruff, but with a trace of excitement in the tone. "She's fixed all right. Hold hard, now, mate."

West leaped to the port-hole, and, endeavoring to gain a glimpse without. If land was near it remained invisible, nor could he even be sure of the close proximity of a boat. There seemed to be a smudge there at the left, a black, lumpy shadow, shapeless against the background of sea; yet he could not be sure. Even as he gazed at it doubtfully, the dim object disappeared, fading away like a mirage. He was not important enough for that; he was but an incident.

While this was—must be—a carefully arranged plan. The girl then must be the real victim—his own plight arose merely because he eluded to be there, and the villains dare not leave him alive to tell the story.

The certainty of this acted like an electric shock. He must find the girl, and serve her. Surely she must welcome his coming to her assistance now. She would be alone, free to reveal the truth of all this strange mix-up of affairs; perhaps the old trust, the old confidence between them would be renewed. The hope instantly inspired action. His eager eyes searched the narrow confines of the stateroom for some possible weapon with which to assault the door. The stout stool alone seemed available. Swinging this over his shoulder, hampered by the narrowness of space, he struck again and again, with all his strength, until suddenly the lock gave, and the door burst open.

He stepped cautiously forward, with hands outstretched, and his groping fingers came in sudden contact with the cabin wall, which he followed, circling to the left. In this manner he succeeded in finally locating the door opening out on to the deck, and heaved his way across to the right-hand stateroom door. It was locked, the key gone. He must break a way in; but first he must explain to her, so as to spare her the sudden fright of such an assault. He rapped sharply on the panel.

"Miss Coolidge; you are there, are you not?"

"Yes; who is that?" almost a cry of delight in the voice. "You—you have a voice I know."

"I am Matthew West; but do not ask questions now. The yacht is going down, and I must break this door in to release you. Stand back while I smash the boards. You hear and understand?"

"Yes—yes; I am safely away; have no fear."

A lantern's flickering light revealed the weapon he required—a heavy hatchet, and he snatched it up, and began to splinter the wood with well-directed blows. He worked madly, feverishly, swinging the sharp blade with all his strength and skill, gouging out great splinters of wood, and finally forcing the lock to yield. He sprang eagerly through the opening, the hatchet still in his grasp, and faced her.

An instant both paused, and then she cried out in sudden relief. "Oh, it is really you, Captain West. I know now. What has happened? How did you come to be here?"

"Not now," he insisted. "Don't ask me now. Just come as quick as you can. There is no time for anything but action. Quick; let me take your hand."

She permitted him to draw her through the door on to the black, deserted deck. West, bracing himself to the sudden plunging, managed to reach the rail. He drew back, sick at heart at the sight of the waves lapping the side almost on a level with the sloping deck on which he stood. The sight brought him home as never before, the dear deadly peril in which they were. He would find some means of rescue; he must! He was back instantly, grasping her arm.

"Quick," he cried. "You know this yacht; what small boats did she carry?"

"Only the one; the other was so warped it had been taken ashore."

"Was there no life-raft? There must surely be something of that kind."

"Yes, there is; I remember now. It is forward there, near the engine-room hatch."

The deck was already sloping to port in a dangerous degree, and West was compelled to cling to the rail, as they slowly made passage forward through the darkness. He located the life-raft at last, securely fastened to the side of the deck house, and, leaving the girl to hold herself upright as best she could, began to hack it loose. Working with feverish impetuosity, he realized suddenly that his companion had deserted, the place where he had left her and was also tugging and slashing at the lashings of the raft. These finally yielded to their blind attack. Without the exchange of a word the two grasped the slides and shoved the thing hard down against the port rail.

"Wait now," he cried exultantly. "Stay behind, and brace yourself against the hatch-cover. I'll get underneath and lift. Once on the rail the two of us must shove it free overboard."

She understood instantly, and, with a single swift glance at her dimly revealed figure, West straightened up, bearing the full weight on his shoulders, every muscle strained to the utmost, as he thus pressed it over inch by inch across the wooden barrier. Suddenly the great unwieldy mass slid forward, poised itself an instant on the rounded rail. The yacht rolled sharply to port, flinging both on to the deck together, but sending the raft crunching overboard, clear of the side. West grasped Natalie, and dragged her to her feet, but even as he held her in his arms, ready to leap out into the black water, the shuddering vessel, with a last despairing effort, partially righted herself, and staggered on.

"Can you jump to the raft from the rail?" he asked. "It is either that, or the water. Are you afraid to try?"

"Afraid—no. Hold me; yes; that way, but—what are you going to do?"

"Follow, of course; but I shall take to the water. There are no oars here. Nothing to use as a substitute for them. I'll have to swim, and push that old ark as far away as possible. Are you ready?"

She poised herself, held steady by the grip of his hands, her eyes on the dark outline of the floating raft. There was no hesitancy, no questioning. "Say when," he said sharply. "Now."

She sprang forward, and came down, sinking to her knees, and clinging fast, as the raft bobbed up and down under her sudden weight, dipping until the water relled completely over it.

St. Ignatius' Church News

Last Sunday was Low Sunday, and the services at St. Ignatius' Church were as usual. Next Sunday there will be Church School at 9:45, morning prayer and address at 11:00 and the last Confirmation Class at 4:30 in the afternoon. It is most important that every member be present at the last Confirmation instruction before the bishop comes.

The Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, will visit St. Ignatius' church next Wednesday evening, April 18th, for the purpose of administering confirmation. The service will be at 7:30 in the evening, and the public is most cordially invited to be present at this time.

Bishop Anderson is a man of world-wide reputation, and is high in ecclesiastical affairs in this country. He has done much for the cause of church unity, and has made several trips to Europe for that cause. It is a rare opportunity for Antioch to hear him, and everyone is most cordially invited to take advantage of this opportunity.

The bishop will stay over night, and will celebrate Holy Communion on Thursday morning, at which time the confirmation class will make their first communion, and there will be a corporate communion of the whole parish. A breakfast will be served for the communicants after the service.

Don't miss this opportunity.

COMMUNICATION

Editor of Antioch News:
Dear Sir:

Somehow I was deeply impressed by the visit I had at your plant on April 2nd. The fact that I had never seen a Linotype machine before and the way it is operated seemed to fascinate me and the result was the enclosed lines.

I decided not to let this go to old before sending it to you and getting your fair opinion on it:

Serve and Live

Oh wonders of today
The products of man's brain
Impell me now to say
That life is not in vain.
For each contribution
Although they differ far
Brings it's own solution
And adds another star.
How small am I, just one
Of all the thinking minds
How little could he do.
Were't not for different kinds.
There is a purpose, sure
For every one who lives
'n Life's easy to endure
It man but service gives.

Yours very truly,

Methodist Episcopal Church News

Excellent congregations last Sunday, both morning and evening.

Next Sunday morning is Communion. All who are determined to obey God fully and are trusting in Christ alone to save them from their sins are welcome to the Lord's table regardless of church membership. Let all remember the hour, 10:45, the coming Sunday morning. And we must not forget that it is Christ's own definite command that all shall take the communion.

Last Sunday morning the theme was "The Blundering Life of the Spiritually Ignorant." Some mistakes are unavoidable. But they bring us trouble. Therefore, we should get rid of our blunders as fast as possible. Mistakes in small things bring us annoyance, but blunders in the big things bring us disaster. In the big things we dare not blunder, for it means ruin. But all the big things of life are in the realm of the mind, the soul, the spirit. Nothing is great or important for real life interest that is not of the spirit. And the source of our knowledge of the whole realm of the spiritual is the Bible—especially the New Testament. We cannot avoid making a vast blunder of our whole life if we are not daily studying the

New Testament, we are spiritually ignorant, we are like a ship without a rudder, drifting and driven with the winds on a wild sea. If we do not discover from the New Testament the goal of life and how to reach it, we are headed for no port, and will never reach any port, but are sure to be driven on the rocks. Nothing can save us short of daily, earnest, intense study of the New Testament. Why go blundering to ruin when the saving knowledge is at hand?

The evening service was informal, the congregation finding for themselves from the New Testament the answer to the question, "Does God require us to be very good, or only tolerably good?" From Christ's own words it was found that God can never be satisfied with us to live any other than a thoroughly, intensely good life, here and now. He says: "If we are lukewarm, He will spit us out."

Does Your Husband Praise Your Cooking?

RED STAR OIL STOVE

Many husbands eat their meals day after day without comment. They do not complain nor do they enthuse; especially when meals are cooked on an oil stove.

But in the Red Star home there is a difference. Every day the cooking is praised. And women who will come to our demonstration at the store will find out why.

The Red Star is an oil stove. It uses kerosene, gasoline or distillate. But it uses it in an improved, modern way.

The patented Red Star burner HAS NO WICKS. It gives two rings of clean, hot gas fire. You cook with fast gas heat. You bake in a real gas oven. You have all the comfort and joy of cooking with a fine gas stove and you get the same fine results. Yet you save one quarter of your fuel.

Every day women are seeing their favorite recipes baked in Red Star ovens or cooked on Red Star burners just as satisfactorily as with gas. If you haven't this remarkable stove come and see it. Latest models are being offered at prices within reach of all.

"The Girl and the Case"

By Randall Parrish

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Answering an advertisement calling for a young man willing to engage in service of danger, Matthew West, ex-service man just returned from France, where he has been an engineer, meets Natalie Coullidge, writer of the advertisement, and without being instructed as to his probable duties, is engaged by her, and that same evening introduced to her friends as her fiancé.

CHAPTER II.—That night, in the Coullidge home, West is startled by the appearance in his room of a young woman, whom he takes to be Natalie, but who escapes before he can be sure. Next morning Natalie tells West she has been troubled by some woman, apparently her double, who has been impersonating her.

CHAPTER III.—Percival Coullidge, Natalie's uncle and guardian, apparently is disconcerted by West's appearance as Natalie's fiancé, and the feeling of antagonism is mutual. Natalie, Coullidge, and West plan a visit of charity to a poor and remote section of the city.

CHAPTER IV.—Leaving West in the car, Natalie and Coullidge enter a small cottage, remaining a length of time which causes him some uneasiness. Before they return, West secures information which leads him to believe Coullidge is deceiving Natalie, and has ulterior motives.

CHAPTER V.—On the party's return to the Coullidge home, Natalie informs West she has been mistaken in her suspicions concerning her "double" and that she has no further need for his services. West is astounded, but helpless. He leaves.

CHAPTER VI.—On his way out of the grounds, West hears a revolver shot, and investigates. He finds Percival Coullidge dead, apparently a suicide. The inquest is determined. In the city West is visited by Sexton, an old servant of the Coullidges. Sexton tells him he has been abruptly dismissed for no apparent reason. He gives it as his belief that Coullidge was murdered, and about convinces West he is right.

CHAPTER VII.—Sexton has overheard a telephone conversation in the Coullidge home, in which a man demands Natalie's presence immediately. He gives an address, and with Sexton, West, his suspicions of things not being right strengthened by his learning that Coullidge had lied about the reason for the trip to the cottage, visits the place. It is a respectable saloon.

CHAPTER VIII.—West is taken by surprise, knocked out, and separated from Sexton, and comes to his senses to find himself bound and helpless, and confronted by a man named Hobart, whom West knows to be the man who had rented the house where Natalie visited. The man tells him he (West) is interfering with his plans and if he persists will be done away with. West refuses any compromise. Hobart sends for Natalie, hoping she can induce West to let him go.

CHAPTER IX.—Natalie releases West from his bonds and assures him that she has no need for his assistance. Her actions almost convince West she has guilty knowledge of Percival Coullidge's murder. He denies Hobart, and the two, with two companions, attempt to kill him. After a terrible fight West gains from the struggle.

CHAPTER X.—West succeeds in eluding his pursuers, finds Sexton bound and gagged, releases him, and the two escape. In the alley Sexton picks up a lady's pen-knife, which he gives to West.

CHAPTER XI.—Concealed in the knife West finds a note in a woman's handwriting appealing to the police to "search the Seminoles." West takes the note to police headquarters, where he meets an old friend he had known in France, McAdams. They find that the Seminoles is a yacht owned by Percival Coullidge.

CHAPTER XII.—McAdams learns the Seminoles is tied up at a pier. West goes over there alone, is deceived aboard, made a prisoner, and the vessel sails.

CHAPTER XIII.—His captors inform West that they are determined his activities in the Coullidge case shall be ended. The men deny that Natalie is aboard the vessel. That night, with West locked in his cabin, the boat is abandoned by its crew. West breaks out of the cabin, finds and releases Natalie, and the two escape on a life raft. The Seminoles goes down.

CHAPTER XIII

The Fate of a Prisoner.

The Seminoles headed straight out into the lake. No sound of movement or speech reached West's ears from the cabin, and he settled down into moody forgetfulness, still springing dully out through the open port. What was to be, would be, but there was nothing for him to do but wait for those who held him prisoner, to act. He was still seated there, listless, incapable even of further thought, when the door was suddenly unlocked. He had barely time to arise to his feet, when the man with the red mustache stepped within, facing him, as he pushed tightly shut the door behind. The fellow's eyes saw the severed rope on the floor, and he smiled, kicking the strands aside contemptuously.

"Smart enough for that, were you?" he asked. "Well, I would have taken them off myself, if I had thought about it. How did you manage? Oh, I see; rather a bright trick, old man." The man's tone, and air of confidence was impressive; beyond doubt he felt that the cards were all in his hands. West drew in his breath sharply. "May I ask a question, or two?"

"Fire away; I'll answer as I please." "Who is the woman on board?" "Mary, you mean? Hobart's wife." "She came from the place on Wray street last night in an auto?"

"Yes; I brought her along myself." "Alone?"

"There were two of us, Mark and I—why, what are you driving at?"

"Just putting some broken threads together. Then Natalie Coullidge is not on this yacht?"

"I should say not. What would we be doing with her out here?"

"Where is she, then?"

"Oh, I begin to see what brought

you aboard so easily, West. You thought we had the lady kidnapped, and was sailing off with her. Some stunt, that. What put the idea in your head?"

West hesitated a moment, but decided a truthful answer would do no harm.

"I knew an automobile had driven out of the alley back of Mike's place, and that a woman was in it. When I got away a little later, I picked up a message—a note which had been dropped. It was written in a woman's hand but unsigned."

"The little cat! She dropped it?"

"It seems so. You forgot yourself that time. So she was with you, was she?"

"I don't know what you mean. I told you who were with me. Go on; what did the note say?"

"It was only a request for the police to search the Seminoles at once."

"Oh, that's the way the wind blows. But you preferred to tackle the job yourself. I am certainly obliged to you, West."

"You have no reason to be. I took that note to the police, and they are on the case. They are combing the city right now for Hobart, and if they get him, this bubble of yours is likely to be pricked."

"If I, they won't get him. There isn't a fly-cop in Chicago who could locate him in a week, and as for Natalie, believe me she is quite able to take care of herself."

"But where is she?"

"At home, of course, if you must know—Fairlawn, isn't that the name of the place? We left her there on our way to Jackson park."

"Then the girl was with you?"

"Spilled the beans, didn't I? That comes from talking too much. However, there is no harm done. Sure she left with us, but we dropped her out at Fairlawn. It was her machine we were riding in. Say, you've questioned me about enough, so let up. Listen now—you will stay in this stateroom until we get ready to let you out. Don't try any funny business, either, for if you do, you are going to get hurt. There is a guard outside in the cabin, and we are not afraid to shoot out here on the lake. Nobody knows where you are West; so, if you want to live, keep quiet—that's my advice."

He slipped out, closing and locking the door behind him. West, more thoroughly confused than ever over the situation in which he found himself, paced the brief length of the narrow stateroom, and then paused to stare moodily out of the port.

He had learned little of the slightest value; merely that Natalie had been of the party leaving in the automobile the night before. She, undoubtedly, had been the one who had dropped the note. Then, in spite of all they said about her, in spite of what she had told him, she was actually a prisoner, desperately begging for assistance to escape. As to the other things Hogan had told him, the probability was they were mostly lies. West did not believe the girl had returned to "Fairlawn," the story did not sound natural. The longer he thought it all over, the more thoroughly was he convinced the girl and he were both prisoners on the same vessel. Yet what could he do? He sank down, with head in his hands, totally unnerved—it was his fate to attempt nothing; only to wait for fortune.

Mark brought in food, merely opening the door slightly, and sliding the tray in on the floor. No words were exchanged, nor was the tray removed until just at twilight, when the fellow appeared again on a similar mission. It became dark, but no light was furnished. Outside the clouds had thickened, and a heavy swell was tossing the vessel about rather roughly. Seemingly the engine was merely endeavoring to maintain head-way, with no port in immediate prospect; they were steering aimlessly into the promise of a stormy night. No sound reached him from the cabin, and finally, worn out mentally and physically, West flung himself on the lower bunk, and lay there motionless, staring up into the intense darkness.

Lying there motionless, yet wide awake, his senses alert, he could feel the labored efforts of the vessel, the slap of waves against the side, the rush of water astern. The Seminoles rolled heavily, yet there was nothing at all alarming in her actions, and West felt no premonition of illness, or fear as to the sea-worthiness of the little craft. He endeavored to arouse himself, to keep awake, but finally fatigue conquered, and he sank into a deep sleep. He had no knowledge of how long this slumber lasted, or what suddenly awakened him, so startled at the moment that he sat up in the berth, staring into the blackness. Was it a dream, or a reality? Had some one spoken? He could neither see nor hear anything; the boat seemed to be motionless, not even throbbing now to the beat of the engine—the silence was uncanny. Something was wrong, must be wrong. Where were they—at anchor in some harbor or helplessly adrift on the lake? The yacht rocked gently, as though the swell of the sea no longer buffeted her; there was no sound of action on the deck above. Then he heard a voice again, outside, reaching him this time plainly through the open port.

"All set, Mopey," it said sharply. "Come on down. You finished the job?"

"Ay, ay, sir," the answer gruff, but with a tinge of excitement in the tone. "She's fixed all right. Hold hard, now, mate."

West leaped to the port-hole, and, endeavoring to gain a glimpse without. If land was near it remained invisible, nor could he even be sure of the close proximity of a boat. There seemed to be a smudge there at the left, a black, lumping shadow, shapeless against the background of sea; yet he could not be sure. Even as he gazed at it doubtfully, the dim object disappeared, fading away like a mirage. Something told him that mysterious shadow was a boat, a boat filled with men, creeping away silently into the night, fleeing from the yacht, and vanishing into the darkness.

What could such action mean? Had every one gone, leaving the vessel totally abandoned, a wreck buffeted by the surges, doomed to go down, unseen, its final fate unknown? Unknown! The word rising to his brain was the answer. There was the crest of the plot. What could be easier, or safer, than this ending? Who would ever know the truth? Who could ever prove anything, even if they suspected? And who was there to suspect? It was a plot infernal.

But if Natalie Coullidge was also prisoner on board, what of her? Wasn't that the very thing most probable? Of course it was; how foolish he had been. These men, recklessly criminal, as they were, would never sacrifice the yacht, and risk their own lives, merely to put him out of the way. He was not important enough for that; he was but an incident. While this was—must be—a carefully arranged plan. The girl then must be the real victim—his own plight arose merely because he chanced to be there, and the villains dare not leave him alive to tell the story.

The certainty of this acted like an electric shock. He must find the girl, and serve her. Surely she must welcome his coming to her assistance now. She would be alone, free to reveal the truth of all this strange mix-up of affairs; perhaps the old trust, the old confidence between them would be renewed. The hope instantly inspired action. His eager eyes searched the narrow confines of the stateroom for some possible weapon with which to assault the door. The stout stool alone seemed available. Swinging this over his shoulder, hampered by the narrowness of space, he struck again and again, with all his strength, until suddenly the lock gave, and the door burst open.

He stepped cautiously forward, with hands outstretched, and his groping fingers came in sudden contact with the cabin wall, which he followed, circling to the left. In this manner he succeeded in finally locating the door opening out on to the deck, and weaved his way across to the right-hand stateroom door. It was locked, the key gone. He must break a way in; but first he must explain to her, so as to spare her the sudden fright of such an assault. He rapped sharply on the panel.

"Miss Coullidge: you are there, are you not?"

"Yes; who is that?" almost a cry of delight in the voice. "You—you have a voice I know."

"I am Matthew West; but do not ask questions now. The yacht is going down, and I must break this door in to release you. Stand back while I smash the boards. You hear and understand?"

"Yes—yes; I am safely away; have no fear."

A lantern's flickering light revealed the weapon he required—a heavy hatchet, and he snatched it up, and began to splinter the wood with well-directed blows. He worked madly, feverishly, swinging the sharp blade with all his strength and skill, gouging out great splinters of wood, and finally forcing the lock to yield. He sprang eagerly through the opening, the hatchet still in his grasp, and faced her.

An instant both paused, and then she cried out in sudden relief. "Oh, it is really you, Captain West. I know now. What has happened? How did you come to be here?"

"Not now," he insisted. "Don't ask me now. Just come as quick as you can. There is no time for anything but action. Quick; let me take your hand."

She permitted him to draw her through the door on to the black, deserted deck. West, bracing himself to the sudden plunging, managed to reach the rail. He drew back, sick at heart at the sight of the waves lapping the side almost on a level with the sloping deck on which he stood. The sight brought him home as never before, the dread deadly peril in which they were. He would find some means or rescue; he must! He was back instantly, grasping her arm.

"Quick," he cried. "You knew this yacht; what small boats did she carry?"

"Only the one; the other was so warped it had been taken ashore."

"Was there no life-raft? There must surely be something of that kind."

"Yes, there is; I remember now. It is forward there, near the engine-room hatch."

The deck was already sloping to port in a dangerous degree, and West was compelled to cling to the rail, as they slowly made passage forward through the darkness. He located the life-raft at last, securely fastened to the side of the deck house, and, leaving the girl to hold herself upright as best she could, began to hack, it loose. Working with feverish impatience, he realized suddenly that his companion had deserted the place where he had left her and was also tugging and slashing at the lashings of the raft. These finally yielded to their blind attack. Without the exchange of a word the two grasped the slides and shoved the thing hard down against the port rail.

"Wait now," he cried exultantly. "Stay behind, and brace yourself against the hatch-cover. I'll get underneath and lift. Once on the rail the two of us must shove it free overboard."

She understood instantly, and, with a single swift glance at her dimly revealed figure, West straightened up, bearing the full weight on his shoulders, every muscle strained to the utmost, as he thus pressed it over inch by inch across the wooden barrier. Suddenly the great unwieldy mass slid forward, poised itself an instant on the rounded rail. The yacht rolled sharply to port, flinging both on to the deck together, but sending the raft crunching overboard, clear of the slide. West grasped Natalie, and dragged her to her feet, but, even as he held her in his arms, ready to leap out into the black water, the shuddering vessel, with a last despairing effort, partially righted herself, and staggered on.

"Can you jump to the raft from the rail?" he asked. "It is either that, or the water. Are you afraid to try?"

"Afraid—no. Hold me; yes; that way, but—but what are you going to do?"

"Follow, of course; but I shall take to the water. There are no ours here. Nothing to use as a substitute for them. I'll have to swim, and push that old ark as far away as possible. Are you ready?"

She poised herself, held steady by the grip of his hands, her eyes on the dark outline of the floating raft. There was no hesitancy, no questioning.

"Say when," he said sharply.

"Now."

She sprang forward, and came down, sinking to her knees, and clinging fast, as the raft bobbed up and down under her sudden weight, dipping until the water rolled completely over it.

St. Ignatius' Church News

Last Sunday was Low Sunday, and the services at St. Ignatius' Church were as usual. Next Sunday there will be Church School at 9:45, morning prayer and address at 11:00 and the last Confirmation Class at 4:30 in the afternoon. It is most important that every member be present at the last Confirmation instruction before the bishop comes.

The Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, will visit St. Ignatius' church next Wednesday evening, April 18th, for the purpose of administering confirmation. The service will be at 7:30 in the evening, and the public is most cordially invited to be present at this time.

Bishop Anderson is a man of world-wide reputation, and is high in ecclesiastical affairs in this country. He has done much for the cause of church unity, and has made several trips to Europe for that cause. It is a rare opportunity for Antioch to hear him, and everyone is most cordially invited to take advantage of this opportunity.

The bishop will stay over night, and will celebrate Holy Communion on Thursday morning, at which time the confirmation class will make their first communion, and there will be a corporate communion of the whole parish. A breakfast will be served for the communicants after the service. Don't miss this opportunity.

COMMUNICATION

Editor of Antioch News:

Dear Sir:
Somehow I was deeply impressed by the visit I had at your plant on April 2nd. The fact that I had never seen a Linotype machine before and the way it is operated seemed to fascinate me, and the result was the enclosed lines.

I decided not to let this get to old before sending it to you and getting your fair opinion on it.

Serve and Live
Oh wonders of today
The products of man's brain
Impell me now to say
That life is not in vain.
For each contribution
Although they differ far
Brings it's own solution
And adds another star.
How small am I, just one
Of all the thinking minds
How little could be done
Were't not for different kinds.
There is a purpose, sure
For every one who lives
'a Life's easy to endure
If man but service gives.

Methodist Episcopal Church News

Excellent congregations last Sunday, both morning and evening.

Next Sunday morning is Communion. All who are determined to obey God fully and are trusting in Christ alone to save them from their sins are welcome to the Lord's table regardless of church membership. Let all remember the hour, 10:45, the coming Sunday morning. And we must not forget that it is Christ's own definite command that all shall take the communion.

Last Sunday morning the theme was "The Blundering life of the Spiritually Ignorant." Some mistakes are unavoidable. But they bring us trouble. Therefore, we should get rid of our blunders as fast as possible. Mistakes in small things bring us annoyance, but blunders in the big things bring us disaster. In the big things we dare not blunder, for it means ruin. But all the big things of life are in the realm of the mind, the soul, the spirit. Nothing is great or important for real life interest that is not of the spirit. And the source of our knowledge of the whole realm of the spiritual is the Bible—especially the New Testament. We cannot avoid making a vast blunder of our whole life if we are not daily studying the

New Testament, we are spiritually ignorant, we are like a ship without a rudder, drifting and driven with the winds on a wild sea. If we do not discover from the New Testament the goal of life and how to reach it, we are headed for no port, and will never reach any port, but are sure to be driven on the rocks. Nothing can save us short of daily, earnest, intense study of the New Testament. Why go blundering to ruin when the saving knowledge is at hand?

The evening service was informal, the congregation finding for themselves from the New Testament the answer to the question, "Does God require us to be very good, or only tolerably good?" From Christ's own words it was found that God can never be satisfied with us to live any other than a thoroughly, intensely good life, here and now. He says if we are lukewarm, He will spit us out.

Odd Delicacy.

Does Your Husband Praise Your Cooking ?

RED STAR OIL STOVE

Many husbands eat their meals day after day without comment. They do not complain nor do they enthuse; especially when meals are cooked on an oil stove.

But in the Red Star home there is a difference. Every day the cooking is praised. And women who will come to our demonstration at the store will find out why.

The Red Star is an oil stove. It uses kerosene, gasoline or distillate. But it uses it in an improved, modern way.

The patented Red Star burner HAS NO WICKS. It gives two rings of clean, hot gas fire. You cook with fast gas heat. You bake in a real gas oven. You have all the comfort and joy of cooking with a fine gas stove and you get the same fine results. Yet you save one quarter of your fuel.

Every day women are seeing their favorite recipes baked in Red Star ovens or cooked on Red Star burners just as satisfactorily as with gas. If you haven't this remarkable stove come and see it. Latest models are being offered at prices within reach of all.

Mr. and Mrs. Walanco are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a son, Charles G., at the Lying-in hospital in Chicago last Saturday afternoon. Both mother and son are doing nicely.

M. B. Laph of Chicago, a nephew of Mr. Walanco expects to spend the summer assisting Mr. Walanco in the store.

Miss Myrtle Haynes attended a piano recital given by John Aiden at the studio of his instructor Arthur Frazer in Chicago Monday evening of last week, spending the remainder of the week with friends in South Chicago.

Beatrice and Leigh Lamb spent over the week end in Grayslake with relatives.

Miss Mary Wilton entertained on her birthday last Tuesday afternoon. Those present were: Mrs. John Martin, Mrs. Bert Dickey, Mrs. Joseph Horton, Mrs. Rippard, Mrs. Isaacs and Miss Addie Wilton. Cards were played, Miss Mary Wilton winning first prize and Mrs. Isaacs the booby prize. Dainty refreshments were served. Mr. Bert Dickey called to take his wife home and got in on the refreshments. All had a very enjoyable time. A number of nice gifts were received.

Doings at the Grade School

ARTHUR WERTZ, Editor

The Story related some interesting facts to the sixth grade concerning her great uncle's experiences while in the Union army under General Grant.

Allen Hanke returned to school today after having been absent one week because of sickness.

The third grade will be sorry to lose Helen Burnett. We understand the family is to move to the county.

Agnes Peterson brought some British, Dutch, Danish and French coins for the fifth and sixth grades to see. Green curtain and pussy willows make spring seem a little nearer to the third graders.

Milton Mumford is released from quarantine but is not allowed to be at school.

There were few failures in the seventh and eighth civics final.

The pupils of the fourth grade had a surprise party for Miss McLin Friday afternoon.

Beatrice and Leigh Lamb spent the week end with their mother at Grayslake.

The topics for oral composition in the seventh and eighth grade Tuesday were: "Our School Yard at Recess" and "How I Lost My Belief in Santa Claus."

Agnes Boudin is still under quarantine for scarlet fever.

The seventh and eighth grades have finished civics and are now taking physiology.

We will plant a tree Friday, April 20, on the school grounds. Appropriate exercises will be held.

The Campfire Girls

Mary Herman, Editor.

Guardian, Mrs. Mary Bright. A meeting was held last Friday, after school. At the meeting the girls decided that our regular meetings would be held at that time in the future.

There were four girls at the meeting to come in the campfire at the next council fire. In the meantime two more girls had spoken to Mrs. Bright about joining.

Several business plans were spoken of but are yet to be settled.

KINDRED OF THE DUST AT CRYSTAL FRI-SAT.

It's not often you find a play that sweeps forward with the spontaneity of dramatic action and thrill of events of "Kindred of the Dust."

The appeal of little Nan of Sawdust Plie, the force of the grim old Laird, the dappling courage and cowardice of the son, the truth to type of a score of characters surrounding them fill this production with the maximum of entertainment and makes it a high-water mark in the achievements of R. A. Walsh.

—With—

BETTY COMPSON and BERT LYTELL

When Love and Daring Ruled—

Here's the world's most gorgeous romance living gloriously on the screen—a masterpiece of thrills and beauty.

You'll see lovely Betty Compson as the royal maid who jilts the King's favorite for a commoner. You'll see Bert Lytell as a dashing soldier of fortune who dares a hundred deaths to win her love. You'll see roaring fights on land and sea, a pirate ship blown to atoms, passionate love scenes in thatched huts and royal boudoirs, all the shimmering splendor of a profligate court.

The brilliant supporting cast, headed by Theodore Kosloff, includes W. J. Ferguson, Raymond Hatton and Walter Long.

More than a wonderful picture—a breathless adventure of pure delight!

MAIL ORDER CONCERNS WATCH WEEKLY PAPERS

Discussing the growth of the mail order business, the Wall Street Journal has this to say:

"How profitable an investment for a long pull may be in a well managed company with an expanding business is exemplified by a purchase of Sears, Roebuck & Co. stock some years ago. An investor who had faith in the future of the mail order business and management of this company bought 600 shares in 1908 when selling around $40 per share, the 600 costing a little less than $25,000. In 1911 a stock dividend of 33 1/3 per cent was paid, increasing his holdings to 800 shares. Another stock dividend of 50 per cent was paid in 1915, which added 400 shares more, making his ownership 1,200 shares. Capital was again increased early this year by a 25 per cent stock dividend, making his present holdings 1,500 shares, on which cash dividends of $8 annually are being paid. The investor is therefore receiving $12,000 a year from his original investment of about $25,000, and as Sears-Roebuck stock is quoted around $160 a share, the present market value of his stock is $240,000, giving him a profit of $215,000 at market price in addition to cash dividends received during nine years."

It will interest local merchants to know that the large mail order houses have a force of girls whose sole duty is to examine country newspapers and report on the local advertising they carry.

In towns where the local merchants are poor advertisers the mail order man concentrates his fire. He avoids the town where the local merchants are sufficiently astute to keep the trade at home.

Mail order competition never need be serious if the local merchant is alive to his opportunity.

Not long ago in the Middle West one enterprising merchant facing this mail order difficulty bought certain articles from a mail order concern and displayed them in his store alongside similar articles he himself handled, and he soon proved to his public that they saved money by shopping at home.

Channel Lake School

The seventh and eighth grade classes have collected the following history of the Channel Lake school district.

The class extends thanks to Mrs. A. J. Felter, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. Wilcox and Mr. Charles Smith for the assistance given in doing this.

The original school building was located on the site now occupied by Mrs. Fenderson's auto garage.

It was a small plain wood building with about a twelve by sixteen foot floor plan. There were wood benches, extending along the sides, with rudo desks in front. There was a long wood stove at one end, built for holding logs. The lighting was very poor as there were only three windows on each side and the old brick chimney took up much space from the east side.

Some of the early teachers of this schoolhouse were: Ella Cook, Kate Calle, Ad Rector, Helen Paddock, Sarah Warner, Vine Sanborn, Estella Orgis and Ed. McGovern.

The present school building was built forty-nine years ago. Mr. Owen of Wilmot was the architect and builder.

Following are the names of some of the teachers who have taught here: Hattie Pullen, Maggie Gaggin, Frank Gaggin, Will Emmons, Maggie Harber, Bob Giece, Eugene Runyard, Kate Dowell, Oliver Cuhbon, Lillie Watson, Minnie Lux, Pauline Smart, Barbara Ebert, Mary Felter, Anna Brogan, Fred Sheehan, Earnest Cox and Alice Hatch.

Channel Lake school has had some teachers and pupils who have gone quite high on the ladder of fame.

The Norwegian American hospital of Chicago claims one on the medical staff, another a very prominent lawyer of Lake county, also a doctor who is now in Wisconsin.

The school was made a standard school in 1914.

The school board is deserving of much credit for the interest shown these later years. Everything has been done to make the room modern in the way of proper lighting, heating and sanitation.

We are to begin the study of physiology this week.

HICKORY

Friday, April 6th being Emma Pullen's 16th birthday and a schoolday, she celebrated on Saturday. The weather and roads hindered a number from coming, but those that were present spent a most delightful afternoon.

"Touring" was great sport until Pauline got stuck in the mud, and set back 20 miles. Emma received some beautiful gifts and Pauline's wish was, "If I had of been sixteen yesterday. Two years will soon roll around Pauline."

Hickory's "witty" one sent a pretty gift to Emma, the reason was soon figured out. He has a birthday next week and wants a gift in return.

At 4:30 a lovely supper was served and all went merrily until Mr. Hollenbeck and Mr. Trax came in for the birthday cake, which was a sunshin cake, beautifully decorated with pink candles in rosebud holders. All departed before dark wishing Emma many more happy birthdays.

O. L. Hollenbeck and Dave Pullen were in Waukegan Friday on business.

Carrie Christensen spent Saturday in Waukegan.

"I will build a car for the multitude"

Said Henry Ford in 1903—Read how the fulfilment of that prophecy is now made possible through the

Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

For many years it has been Henry Ford's personal ambition to make the Ford the universal family car—to put it within the reach of the millions of people who have never been privileged to enjoy the benefits of motor car ownership.

During the past fifteen years over 7,500,000 Ford cars have been placed in the hands of retail customers—more than a million and a half of them within the past twelve months—and yet there are still millions of families who are hopefully looking forward to the day when they can own a Ford.

And now the way is open.

Under the terms of this plan you can select your Ford Car, set aside a small amount each week and you will be surprised how soon you will own it. In the meantime your money will be safely deposited to your credit in one of the local banks where it will draw interest.

Think it over. Five dollars will start an account. The whole family can participate in it—father, mother, brothers and sisters each doing a little.

Why not start today. Stop in and talk it over with your local Ford dealer. He will be glad to fully explain the details of the plan and help you get started toward the ownership of a Ford car.

THE AULD TIN CUP

Men have sung of many things,
Of gods, of wars, of queens and kings;
I sing a song of the auld tin cup,
—The cup that hung by the pump!
Full well I knew that pleasing taste,
Those purging waters clean and chaste,
That flowed o'er my 'sophagus to my waist,
—From the cup that hung by the pump.
I remember how I used to drink,
After a walk in the field;
I used to thank the Lord, I think,
For what that well could yield,
—And the cup that hung by the pump.

Telephone "Station"

At the beginning and the end of a railroad journey we find a station. This is the most ordinary use of the word "station."

At the beginning and end of a telephone message is a telephone instrument, which we call a station. It is a station of a continent-wide system of voice communication—of which there are more than 14,000,000 others in the Bell System.

"Station-to-station" long distance calls meet almost every requirement and the day rates are about 20% lower than for "person-to-person" calls. Evening and night rates are still lower. Consult the telephone directory for further details or call "Long Distance."

A TELEPHONE call is a call between two of these stations. A long distance telephone call has usually meant a telephone conversation between two persons in different cities or towns.

We have developed a class of long distance service, which we call "station-to-station" service. It means that we undertake to put the two telephone instruments into connection and the party calling talks either to the person who answers or to some one who may be reached immediately at the called telephone or station.

It costs us less to handle a call of this kind and therefore we supply it at a rate lower than the regular "person-to-person" service. The saving is about 20 per cent.

Telephone users are invited to try this method of making their long distance calls and taking advantage of the lower rates. On a "station-to-station" call, the charge applies when any one answers the distant telephone (or private branch exchange).

FEEDING QUALITIES OF SMALL, MEDIUM AND LARGE TYPE PIGS

The Results

An initial study of the feeding qualities of small, medium and large type pigs indicates that it is possible to secure a pig that is too long legged narrow and shallow bodied to produce the most rapid and economical gains. Neither the feeder steer nor the feeder lamb of this type have proven themselves to be of the best conformation for the feed lot; nor has the draft horse of this type shown itself to be best adapted to steady work at heavy loads. A pig may be also too short legged, chuffy, and thick. In this experiment, Poland Chinas of a medium type produced 4.5 percent more rapid gains than those of a small type and 17 percent more rapid gains than those of a larger type. The ability to take feed increase was also in favor of the medium type pigs. These pigs made their gains on 3 percent less feed than those of a small type and 7 percent less feed than those of a large type. There is no disposition to draw final conclusions from this experiment since further work will be conducted this year.

The Pigs

Twenty uniform pigs of each of the three types were selected in June, 1922 and were placed on experiment on July 8 at average weights of 63 to 70 pounds. The small type pigs were selected from two herds of Champaign county, Illinois, to represent the type popular a number of years ago. It was not possible for us to find any of the pigs which represented this type in all respects. However, most of the pigs proved to be of a short legged and thick fleshed kind. Some of these pigs fattened at weights of 160 to 175 pounds. The pigs representing the medium type were secured from two herds of Platt county, Illinois. These pigs were medium in length of leg, length of body and thickness of flesh. They fattened well at weights of 190 to 225 pounds. The large-type pigs were purchased from six of the state's good Poland China breeders in Stark county, Illinois. These pigs represented both in conformation and in breeding what these men were producing and were typical of the kind of pigs most breeders are trying to raise. These pigs were rather long in leg and long, narrow and shallow in body. Very few of these pigs were fat enough for market demands when they were slaughtered at 225 pounds.

The Ration

The ration fed these pigs was corn, tankage and middlings. All the pigs were fed individually but were kept together in three lots when not eating. Until the pigs weighed 120 pounds each, the proportion of corn, tankage and middlings was 4:2:1 after which time it was 12:2:1. Each pig was allowed all the feed that he would clean up readily twice daily.

Fifteen of the pigs in each lot were slaughtered at a weight of 225 pounds for killing records. Check pigs were slaughtered at the beginning of the experiment. Maintenance tests were conducted at the beginning and close of the experiment. Four samples from each pig are being analyzed besides several composite samples for each type. The size and capacity of the stomach and intestines of all pigs have been obtained. These records will be available at a later time.—Rice, Bull, Mitchell and Lable, U. of I.

86 FARM BUREAU PRESIDENTS MEET WITH I. A. A.

President of 86 Illinois County Farm Bureaus met with the Illinois Agricultural Association in Chicago last week to discuss policies in marketing, legislation and other projects of importance to organized agriculture of the State. The meeting was one which had been planned for more than a year and which was called by the I. A. A. Executive Committee at its March session.

E. A. Cunningham, of the U. S. Grain Growers' Sales Co., explained the efforts being made in cooperative grain marketing. Walton Petzet, director of cooperative marketing for the A. F. B. F. talked upon cooperative marketing.

A resolution endorsing the stand taken by the I. A. A. in supporting Senate Bills 155 and 156 was passed unanimously by roll call and signed by all after the details of these measures had been explained to the convention. Senate Bill 155 provides for the organization and incorporation of cooperative marketing organizations. Senate Bill 156 corporation of cooperative marketing associations may be admitted to all public markets and grain exchanges.

The Farm Bureau presidents requested that copies of their resolutions be presented Gov. Len Small and all members of the legislature. "Experience has taught and reliable authorities agree that the marketing of agricultural products by commodity, through cooperative associations is sound in principle," said the resolution. "Senate Bills 155 and 156 offer the agencies for the creation and operation of cooperative associations."

President D. H. Minto of the Lake County Farm Bureau attended this meeting.

THE DAIRY OUTLOOK

Butter in storage now compared with a year ago shows only one-fourth the amount on hand compared with 1922. Butter prices are holding up well, resulting in favorable prices to the patrons of Minnesota and Wisconsin Cooperative Creameries. The outlook is good. The cooperative idea has taken strong hold there for the last 50 years. Most of their butter is sold on the eastern markets and commands a premium above extras quite often.

Patrons of Wisconsin cooperative cheese factories received an average price of $2.40 for their milk in 1922, besides getting back the whey for hog feeding. The cheese market is in a strong position also. Retail prices of genuine Swiss cheese are 55 cents per lb. That is asked for what is called "Imported Swiss Cheese." It would be a fair guess, however, that this cheese was made by a Swiss cheese maker in Wisconsin or Ohio. Remember also that practically all the Swiss cheese made in this country comes from true blue farmers' cooperative factories.

Do not the above facts suggest ways and means whereby other communities are solving their milk marketing problems. If the price milk producers are getting is too low compared with what consumers pay, why not establish cheese factories or creameries here? Again the Twin Cities Milk Marketing Co. of Minneapolis and St. Paul which controls over 90 percent of the cities' milk supply paid on an average to producers in 1922 a good deal more than was paid in Lake county for that year. A McHenry county farmer recently figured up that in marketing 244,336 lbs. of milk that he would have received $1,475.54 more had he been able to market it through the Twin Cities Marketing Co. Think over some of these facts.

Trevor Happenings

More of the beautiful winter weather still prevails.

On account of the unfavorable conditions of the roads, the Liberty Cemetery Helpers society will postpone the annual business meeting of the society from April 17 to April 24. The meeting will be held at the home of Miss Patrick.

S. Schold of Wilmet wired the Charley Hasselman house last week.

Two carloads of spunkrant was shipped from the factory the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Barber of Silver Lake were Trevor callers Wednesday.

Mr. Jack Corkle of Chicago was in Trevor Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. Flora Bloss and granddaughter Florence Bloss of Salem spent Thursday with the Patrick sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Friedhoff have moved from the Henry Lubeno tenant house to the rooms across from the Schreck store.

The household goods of Mr. Cooper arrived Tuesday evening from Aurora, Ill., and on Wednesday evening the family arrived and new are nearly settled in their new home which they recently purchased from Wm. Taylor.

On Monday evening, April 16, at Social Center Hall, Rev. Andrew McGill, a returned missionary from Africa, will give a talk on his work among the natives. He has spent nearly six years in Africa and with his family expects to return in July.

John Turnock of Kenosha is spending the week at his son Rubens.

Milton Patrick was a Kenosha visitor Friday.

Mrs. Staley from the northern part of the state was to see her husband, here, who is in poor health.

Miss Edith Edgar of Antioch spent the week end with her cousin, Elvira Osting.

Oscar Pacey and family are occupying the Frank Moran house at Liberty.

Mr. and Mrs. George Higgins and daughter Geraldine of Wilmet were Trevor callers Saturday.

Mrs. Kate Van Osdel of Chicago came to Trevor Monday afternoon to perfect arrangements for the burial of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Wm. Van Osdel, who passed away at her home in Chicago on Sunday afternoon after an illness of many months. Interment was in Liberty Cemetery.

Mr. Elbert Kennedy returned home Friday after a two weeks' visit with sisters in Chicago and Elgin.

The Misses Daisy Mickie, Lucile and Ethel Runyard of Chicago spent the week end at the L. H. Mickie home.

Mr. Hamilton McKim of Fox du Lac spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Trevor.

The new trains put on the See Line will be greatly appreciated by the traveling public.

Robert Turnock was serving on the jury in Kenosha last week.

Mrs. Louis Oswald and lady friend and Miss Katherine Oswald of Forest Park were over Sunday visitors at the Fred Schreck home.

The card party given by the children at Social Center hall on Saturday evening was well attended. Prizes were won by the following:

JAZZ AT DEATHBED

"Come on Frank, the doctor says you can't live anyway, you can drink all the moonshine you want to," Mrs. Florence Blerling, chief witness for the state in the Kilmeek murder trial at Chicago, testified Mrs. Kilmeek said to her dying husband. She also added to the comfort of the deathbed, the witness testified, by showing him coffins and playing jazz music on the phonograph. The picture shows Mrs. Blerling on the stand.

Mrs. Murry, Mrs. Mickie, Gertrude Mathews, Louis Oswald, Mr. Mickie and Charley Osting.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Marks and children were Raelne visitors Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Geyer and Miss Ender motored to Racine Saturday to attend a play. Elmer Anderson returned with them. He and Miss Ender spent Sunday at the Myers' home.

On Tuesday evening, March 27, the Jolly Juniors had a surprise birthday party on Mrs. Geyer. The evening was spent in playing many games, performing tricks, dancing and eating heartily of a bounteous lunch.

The most exciting event was the mock marriage. Elizabeth Mutz became the blushing bride and Art Kearns the gallant groom, with Rev. John Mutz officiating. The bride was attired in canton crepe with a flowing veil. No one seemed to pay attention to Father Time till about 3 o'clock in the morning, when everyone departed vowing the statement that this was the best party they had attended. Many more happy birthdays, Mrs. Geyer.

Trevor School Notes

(Too late for last week)

Little Dolly VanDe Velder, the Mrs. Geyer, Myers and Lengman, Lillie Freeman of Libertyville, Ill., Doris Kruckman of Burlington and Beatrice Osting visited our room Good Friday.

As Friday p. m. was Easter at school the pupils indulged in various form of amusement. They played Adam and Eve, London bridge, Please or displease, also had peanut scramble and peanut walk. While the little tots were playing squirrel in the upper room the Easter rabbit came and left a basket of eggs on each child's desk.

Those in the first and second grade who received cards for being neither tardy or absent for the past week are Lytle Mathews, Floyd Murphy, Clarence Runyard and Marguerite Evans. Most of the primary youngsters have endured a siege of sore eyes, so in order to follow suit Miss Ender has them now, therefore the dark glasses.

Our champion spellers are George Mathews, Caroline Larwin, Mao Polze and Mildred Hahn.

Elva and August Marks were absent from school Friday.

Uno Mellor brought us a bouquet of pussy willows.

Little Violet Sheen and Jennette Mathews paid us an enjoyable visit Thursday.

Russel Lengman has been on the sick list for this week end.

WHEN IT COMES TO BAKIN'

ANTIOCH BEST FLOUR an' me has got the world beat wid dese biscuits. Dey is so light an' fluffy, an' dey sure do hab de flavor.

Why folkses insist on this shipped-in flour I can't see. It comes farther, but your money don't go so far as when you use good ole ANTI-CH BEST FLOUR made right here at home from our own farmers' wheat.

Dey is two ways to turnin' a pussin's stumick. One way is by puttin' poor baked-trash before 'em; but the best way is to put good bakin's behind 'em.

Take my advice—if you don't get de bestest results from ANTIOCH BEST FLOUR, it sure is your fault.

ATTENTION VOTERS and TAXPAYERS

Next Tuesday is election day. It is your duty as a citizen to vote. Do not neglect it. For your enlightenment we submit the following statements of fact which may correct some wrong impressions you may have received.

What the People's Party Accomplished in the Past Two Years

Main Street paving has been made a reality instead of a possibility. It is now the envy of all surrounding communities.

Side walk grade has been established on entire length of Main Street which will eventually eliminate the "stairways" and mud-holes we now have in places where the sidewalks should be.

Septic Tank has been completed and put in successful operation.

Pledge has been secured from the County Board of Supervisors to pave Lake Street, 18 feet in width, at no cost to property owners. (This is to be done as soon as grade crossing near Lake Villa is completed).

Waterworks—You now have an efficient water works, consisting of two wells, two complete pumping units with motors, either one of which will supply sufficient water for your needs, making it is possible to repair the other in case of necessity without shutting off your water and fire protection for a day or a week.

Two years ago you had one well, one crippled pump—virtually without protection in event of large fire.

One thousand feet of new hose has been ordered and will be delivered within 30 days.

Numerous other smaller improvements have been made.

What People's Party Proposes to Do in the Next Two Years

Pave Depot Street—You will grant the need—We will here attempt to refute a few of the misleading statements which irresponsible parties who have no business of their own to attend to have made against it.

Total estimate of cost, including collection of assessment, engineers and attorney's fees, is $17,215, and of which it is proposed to levy $11,000 against property owners who have frontage on the street, approximately one-third, or $6,000, as a public benefit against the village. This divided into 10 installments amounts to approximately $600 per year for 10 years.

This is in the same ratio as applied between property owners and state on Main Street (state paid one-third). We believe this to be a very just division.

We propose to raise the funds for this yearly assessment by means of a vehicle tax of $5 on cars of 35 h. p. or less and a slightly higher rate on larger vehicles.

This will yield approximately $1,000 per year which will take care of paving assessment and leave $400 per year for other street needs. This will eliminate the largest drain on the General tax fund, viz.—street repairs.

Objections have been made to detail of plans for this improvement, regarding width, elevation, etc. These plans were made by a skilled engineer. The width of 36 feet was recommended by Mr. Rutledge. These men know the paving business (perhaps better than a retired doctor or merchant or policeman.).

A determined and persistent effort was made to remove all poles and wires from Main Street, which, however, was only partially successful. Lines of Public Service Company and Telephone Company are to be consolidated on one set of new poles which will eliminate more than half of the present number of poles.

All easements signed by property owners will be returned as soon as operations are started.

Lighting System—In consolidating pole lines our present lights down town will be removed.

We propose to replace these with 25 ornamental lamps on steel posts. These will be on two circuits. Nine lights on No. 1 circuit to replace existing lighting. Sixteen lights on No. 2 circuit to be turned on only when most needed—say 7:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. in summer season and on Wednesday and Saturday nights in winter.

Estimated cost of installation is $3,600, to be paid by property owners down town only. This amounts to $1.50 or less per front foot on property between Johnson Street and Sequoit Creek.

A Word About Finances

Do not get the impression that because more improvements have been originated in the last two or three years than in the twenty years immediately preceding that we intend to continue at this rate indefinitely. We agree with you that we have had about all we can stand for a while. But when above mentioned items are installed our plans for improvements are completed. We will then have an up-to-date modern town with all necessary conveniences which will attract an ever increasing number of people. If you question the value of these improvements try to buy a piece of property on Main Street at price asked two years ago plus cost of pavement. We could cite you a notable example. The claim is made that the People's Party has run the village into debt. This is not true. The village has been in debt approximately $2,500 on each May 1st for the last 6 years, or since liquor license revenue was withdrawn, and no source of revenue has been found to take its place. Meantime, materials and labor have been paid for at war time prices on "peace time" taxes.

The village will be in debt on May 1, next, the same amount ($2,500)—no more. This includes all unpaid bills, including judgments, etc.

We have not only held our own, but have paid off all except the last installment of the Brownell judgment, which, including attorney's fees and interest, amounted to nearly $3,000. This was an unusual expense item, caused by neglect of private individuals and was not incurred by any village board. Barring similar hard luck in the future, this deficit of $2,500 should be wiped out in the next two years with the help of a vehicle tax.

Has money been wasted? We refer you to the treasurer's reports. We defy you to point to a single item of useless or extravagant expenditure.

The only way we know of to reduce current expenditures from the General fund is to turn off your street lights or water, or both. Does the opposition claim to be able to run the village without money? Have you any assurance that the promises being made on the street can be fulfilled?

Think It Over Mr. Taxpayer!

Do not accept as fact all that is whispered in your ear. Insist on proof.

Do you want to drag the "speed cop" skeleton out of the closet again this summer? We think not.

All People's Party candidates are property owners and substantial taxpayers.

Shall we go forward or backward? We cannot stand still.

Finally

Do you want your village managed by men who have made a success of their own business?
